Count Deals, Not Bookings.

Reset the Metric.

Stop chasing bookings. Reverse-engineer from the money. Phase two thinking on the moments that matter.

WHAT'S INSIDE

Reverse-engineer the maths.

Start from the money. Work backwards to deals. Only then to bookings.

DAILY INCOME TARGET

$250

Pick the number you want to hit. Make it specific.

DEALS REQUIRED

2

Divide income by commission per deal. $250 ÷ $125 = 2.

CORE BOOKINGS

2

Start at the minimum the conversion supports. Two for two.

INSURANCE POLICY

+4

Add four more — third-party + comprehensive. Total: 6 strong bookings.

THE WIN CONDITION

Hit the income target with the fewest strong bookings necessary. That's a deals-per-day rep — not a calls-per-day rep.

The insurance policy.

Six strong bookings beats twenty shallow ones. Layer the bookings — don't pile them.

CORE

TWO BOOKINGS

What you need if your conversion is what you believe it is.

+ THIRD-PARTY

TWO MORE

Covers you if one of the core two falls out unexpectedly.

+ COMPREHENSIVE

TWO MORE

Covers a bad day where conversion drops to half what you projected.

TOTAL: 6 STRONG BOOKINGS

Six well-prepared, well-confirmed bookings will convert better than twenty shallow ones every time. The work is in the prep, not the volume.

Phase one vs phase two thinking.

Most communication is autopilot. The moments that matter need considered thinking.

PHASE ONE · AUTOPILOT

Automatic responses. Default scripts. The brain on cruise control.

- "How are you?" → "I'm good."
- "Is this deal going to close?" → "Yeah, it's hot."
- "Did the buyer confirm process?" → "I think so."
- Most communication. Most days. Most decisions.

PHASE TWO · CONSIDERED

Pause. Think. Give the real answer — not the default one.

- "How are you?" → Honest answer about the actual day.
- "Is this deal going to close?" → Run the signals before answering.
- "Did the buyer confirm?" → Recall the exact words.
- Trained for the moments that matter. Not all the time.

WHEN PHASE TWO MATTERS

Forecasting deals. Diagnosing why a deal dropped. Reading a buyer's pushback. Self-assessment at the end of the day.

Pressure-testing for clarity.

Force yourself into phase two by raising the imagined stakes. The answers get sharper fast.

THE TECHNIQUE

Ask yourself the question as if there were real, immediate stakes. The brain switches from autopilot to considered — and the real answer surfaces.

WHEN TO APPLY IT

01 Before submitting a forecast

"If my whole quarter depended on this prediction, would I still say it?"

02 Before logging a deal as likely-to-close

"Would I bet my own money on this one closing this week?"

03 Before walking away from a stalled deal

"If I had to recover this in 24 hours, what would I do?"

04 Before responding to buyer pushback

"What's the actual question they're asking? Not the surface one."

Awareness as leverage.

The skill underneath every other skill. Without it, the techniques run blind.

WHAT AWARENESS IS

The ability to see yourself, your situation, and your interactions from outside. To step out of phase one autopilot and observe what's actually happening — in real time.

WHERE AWARENESS COMPOUNDS

- PITCHES
  Hearing what the buyer actually said — not what you expected them to say.
- DELIVERY
  Catching the wrong tone in your own voice before the buyer reacts to it.
- PIPELINE
  Noticing which deals are autopilot-yes versus considered-yes.
- SELF-MANAGEMENT
  Noticing when you're operating on autopilot — and choosing to step into phase two.

Daily reference card.

Print and pin. Read at the start of every day.

DO · EVERY DAY

- Track money per day, not bookings per day.
- Reverse-engineer income → deals → bookings.
- Start at the minimum bookings needed.
- Add the insurance policy: core + 4 more.
- Pressure-test deals — "would I bet my money on it?"
- End the day with one real win, with evidence.
- Step into phase two on the moments that matter.
- See your call from the buyer's angle.

DON'T · EVER

- Don't celebrate booking volume as the win.
- Don't extrapolate from history as if it's fixed.
- Don't accept autopilot answers on forecasts.
- Don't fake positivity at end-of-day.
- Don't run technique without awareness.
- Don't aim for 20 bookings when 6 will do.
- Don't ignore the buyer's actual words.
- Don't predict yeses — predict nos.

WATCH-OUTS

- Pipeline clutter from low-quality bookings.
- Conversion ratios that match your worst expectations.
- Forecasts that feel right but haven't been tested.
- Days that feel busy but produced no real wins.
- Vague goals that filter nothing.
- Defaulting to phase one when stakes rise.
- Mistaking activity for progress.
- Pretending one good win was a great day.

THE ONE-LINER

Count deals. Reverse-engineer from money. Phase two when it matters. Find the real win.
