

Cement, Then Negotiate.

Price + terms. The only two objections that matter.

Session 41 · Monday 13 July 2026 · Marketing Sweet

IN THIS TOOLKIT

- 01 Cement early · the "obviously" move
- 02 The two-objection filter
- 03 The verbal commitment questions
- 04 The seesaw + referral counterweight
- 05 "I want your business"
- 06 Daily reference card

01 · THE SETUP MOVE

"Obviously" — Cement Early

Bake it in. Don't spring it at the end.

WRONG · RAISED AT THE END

"Oh, one thing — this is a 12-month agreement."

Buyer's guard goes up. Feels it as a surprise. Treats it as a bargaining chip.

→ THE PRENUP AT THE WEDDING

Buyer is looking for an exit before they've even said yes to the entrance.

RIGHT · CEMENTED EARLY

"Obviously all our packages are minimum 12 months — we need time to get results."

Signals it's not negotiable. Delivered as background context, not as a fight.

→ BAKED INTO THE DEAL

Buyer is saying yes to the whole package — 12 months included.

THE WORD · MEMORISE IT

OBVIOUSLY

"Obviously" signals a given, not an option. Buyer processes it as context, not as an objection to fight. Use it EARLY in the pitch — after value starts building, before pricing.

02 · THE FILTER

Price or Terms

Everything else is a symptom of one of these two.

THE DIAGNOSTIC

Any genuine buyer who stops short of signing stops for one of two reasons. Everything else is surface symptom of one of these two.

PRICE

Too high vs perceived value. Isolate. Add referrals to counterweight if you move on it.

OBJECTION 2

TERMS

Contract length. Exit clauses. Structure. Cement early with "obviously" — negotiate from there.

WHAT ISN'T A REAL OBJECTION · ALL SYMPTOMS OF PRICE / TERMS

- ◆ "I need to think about it" → usually price
- ◆ "My partner has to approve" → often terms or price
- ◆ "I want to sleep on it" → hasn't seen enough value yet
- ◆ "Send me some information" → polite goodbye, or price shock
- ◆ "Not the right timing" → usually price, sometimes terms

03 · THE ISOLATION QUESTIONS

Two Questions

Memorise verbatim. Deliver clean.

QUESTION 1 · FOR TERMS OBJECTIONS

"If it wasn't for the 12 months — would you definitely go ahead today?"

YES → terms is the only blocker. You have a verbal commitment to close against.

HEDGE → terms isn't the real issue. Keep listening for the actual blocker.

QUESTION 2 · FOR PRICE OBJECTIONS

"If we get the price where you want it — we can do the deal today?"

YES → price is isolated. Go get the yes.

HEDGE → something else. Isolate it. Same pattern.

AFTER YOU GET THE YES · THE WALK-AWAY

"Okay, leave it with me. I don't think I can get to six — but let me see what I can do. If I CAN get you to six months, you're happy to go ahead today?"

THREE MOVES IN ONE

Resistance ("I don't think I can"). Effort ("let me see"). Second confirmation ("you're happy to go ahead"). By the time you come back with the director's answer, the buyer has committed TWICE to closing conditional on that variable.

04 · NEVER JUST DISCOUNT

The Seesaw + Referrals

Take price off. Put referrals on.

NEVER DO THIS

Buyer asks for a discount. You say "yeah, we can do that for you." Deal feels like a scam. Buyer thinks: "why didn't you offer me that price in the first place?" Value proposition dies.

THE SEESAW · KEEP IT BALANCED

One side: price. Other side: value. The two need to feel balanced. Drop the price and weight comes off — the value side FEELS heavier ("why are they dropping it so easily? Is something wrong?").

THE FIX

Add weight back to the price side. Get the buyer to CONTRIBUTE something — referrals. Seesaw stays balanced. Deal feels fair. Nobody feels scammed.

THE MOVE · USE VERBATIM

"Can I ask you a question? How many people do you know in business? Give me just two names you'd refer to us on the condition that we do a great job for you. I'm confident I can get this through the director, but the referrals give me the ammunition."

THE INVISIBLE VALUE

The referrals are also an accountability contract. The rep has skin in the game to deliver.

05 · VULNERABILITY + DIRECTNESS

"I Want Your Business"

Break the pattern of the corporate pitch.

USE VERBATIM · ONLY WHEN YOU MEAN IT

"I want your business."

Not "we'd love to work with you." Not "we'd be a great fit." Naked.

WHY IT WORKS

Breaks the pattern.	Most reps hedge. "I want your business" is direct. Buyer notices.
Signals investment.	Buyer feels the rep's actual personal stake in the outcome.
Vulnerability compounds trust.	Same dynamic as "I want to be with you" in a relationship.
Buyers reciprocate.	The felt investment makes them more likely to say yes.

THE PAIRING · VULNERABILITY + QUESTION

"I want your business. What would we need to do to make this work?"

WHY THE PAIRING WORKS

Vulnerability alone can feel exposed. Vulnerability + a question puts the ball back in the buyer's court. Together they produce the warm, inviting close that professionals close on.

REFERENCE

Daily Card · Keep By the Phone

The whole session on one page.

THE FILTER

- ◆ Only TWO real objections: price or terms.
- ◆ Everything else is a surface symptom. Isolate the real one.
- ◆ "I'll think about it" → usually price. Ask which.

THE CEMENT

- ◆ "Obviously" — introduce term at the START. Not the end.
- ◆ "Obviously all our packages are minimum 12 months."
- ◆ Baked in ≠ negotiable. Cement position before you negotiate from it.

THE QUESTIONS

- ◆ "If it wasn't for X, would you go ahead today?"
- ◆ Get the yes BEFORE you walk to the director.
- ◆ Come back with resistance: "I don't think I can, but let me see."

THE COUNTERWEIGHT

- ◆ Never just accept the discount. Add referrals to balance.
- ◆ "Give me two names of mates you'd refer." Seesaw stays flat.
- ◆ "I want your business" — say it when you mean it.

CEMENT EARLY · ISOLATE THE OBJECTION · COUNTERWEIGHT THE DISCOUNT
