

The Burnt Buyer.

Agree first. Extract. Court the hardest rejection.

Session 32 · Friday 12 June 2026 · Marketing Sweet

IN THIS TOOLKIT

- 01 The objection — "all you guys are the same"
- 02 The 5-step playbook
- 03 Power phrases — "that's interesting"
- 04 The 5-minute callback
- 05 Abundance — the buyer is replaceable
- 06 Daily reference card

01 · THE SIGNAL

"All You Guys Are the Same"

The buyer's speech IS the buying signal.

WHAT THE BUYER SAYS

"I get these calls every week. I've heard it all before. I've already been burnt by an SEO company and got nothing out of it. All you guys are the same."

WHAT THE REP HEARS"They're rejecting me."

Instinct kicks in: defend, argue why we're different, or politely retreat.
All three lose the call.

WHAT'S ACTUALLY HAPPENING"Show me what you'll do."

They're still on the call. The ones who genuinely don't care hang up. The speech is the test.

CORIE'S RULE

"The ones who reject the hardest are the buyers. Most people just move on. The ones who deliver a speech are still on the call — which means they're still interested."

02 · RUN IT IN ORDER

The 5-Step Playbook

From speech to booked callback in under 90 seconds.

01 AGREE · unconditionally

"I totally understand. We hear the same thing from people we ring, too."

No "but." No "actually we're different." Just agree. Then a beat.

02 EXTRACT · flip the question

"What would make you feel comfortable? If we were to start a relationship, what would it need to look like?"

The buyer hasn't been asked this before. The silence is theirs, not yours.

03 RECEIPT · acknowledge the gift

"That's interesting. That's really good feedback."

They've handed you the negotiation brief. Receive it, don't fight it.

04 CALLBACK · low confidence, high effort

"I don't think we can do it, but it's worth a shot. Can you give me five minutes? Let me see what I can do."

Five minutes — not ten. "Worth a shot" puts you on their side.

05 COURT · match the ask to where they are

"Why don't we catch up for 10 minutes. I'll show you what I'm seeing — no pressure, just a coffee."

Coffee, not lunch. Screenshot, not proposal. Match their interest level.

03 · THE RECEIPTS

"That's Interesting"

Tiny phrases that buy enormous attention.

PHRASE 1

"That's interesting."

Use after the buyer gives you a specific demand or piece of info.

PHRASE 2

"That's really good feedback."

Use after the buyer tells you what went wrong with their previous provider.

WHY THEY WORK

Most buyers aren't used to having their words treated as valuable. The small dose of recognition opens them up further. They keep talking — and the longer they talk, the more you learn about what will actually close them.

THE "NO BUT" RULE

"I understand, BUT..." is NOT agreement. It's a polite version of the argument the buyer was preparing to win. Agreement is unqualified — "I understand," then a beat, then ask a question.

04 · THE KEY LINE

"Give Me 5 Minutes"

Calibrated low-confidence, high-effort.

THE LINE · USE VERBATIM

"That's really interesting. I don't think we can quite do it, but it's worth a shot, isn't it? Can you give me five minutes? Let me see what I can do for you."

THREE DELIBERATE MOVESLow-confidence opener

"I don't think we can do it." — telegraphs you're on the buyer's side, not the agency's. You're trying to make something happen for them.

Manager theatre

"Let me check with my manager" — buys time to think, lowers the buyer's guard, opens space for negotiation.

5-minute ask

"Can you give me five minutes?" — almost impossible to refuse. "Ten minutes" puts them on guard. Five minutes is coffee-sized.

WHAT THE BUYER'S DEMAND ACTUALLY ISIt's a test. Not a wishlist.

Almost no buyer expects every demand to be granted. The list is them seeing how you handle being asked for the impossible. If you give them everything, they'll panic and back out — too easy means something's wrong.

05 · THE MENTAL DISCIPLINE

Buyers Are Replaceable

The next deal is one phone call away.

THE PRINCIPLE

Want the deal. Never NEED any specific deal.

Wanting and needing produce completely different tones — buyers can detect the difference in three seconds.

HUNGRY REPNeeds THIS deal

- ✗ Hands buyer leverage they didn't earn
- ✗ Concedes too easily
- ✗ Drags out calls trying to save them
- ✗ Bad call colours the next 10 calls

ABUNDANT REPWants the deal

- ◆ Calm, patient, willing to walk
- ◆ Holds the line on terms
- ◆ Cuts dead calls early, moves on
- ◆ Next call is a fresh opportunity

CORIE

"Customers are replaceable. Last one was difficult? Next call. Jackpot. That's the energy. If you let one bad call colour the next ten, the next ten get worse — because you've decided they will."

REFERENCE

Daily Card · Keep By the Phone

The whole session on one page.

THE OBJECTION · THE SIGNAL

- ◆ "All you guys are the same" = still on the call.
- ◆ The ones who don't care just hang up.
- ◆ The hardest rejection is the strongest buyer.

THE 5 STEPS

- ◆ Agree unconditionally — no "but."
- ◆ Extract: "What would make you feel comfortable?"
- ◆ Receipt: "That's interesting / good feedback."
- ◆ Callback: "5 minutes — let me see what I can do."

THE INTERPRETATIONS

- ◆ Buyer's demand list = a test, not a wishlist.
- ◆ Come back with SOMETHING, not EVERYTHING.
- ◆ The close happens at the meeting, not on the call.

THE MINDSET

- ◆ Buyers are replaceable. Next call is one dial away.
- ◆ Want the deal. Never NEED any specific deal.
- ◆ Use your ears. Listen — don't plan your next line.

THE HARDEST REJECTION COMES FROM THE BUYER MOST READY TO BE WON