The 6-week challenge — at a glance

Six weeks. Six runners. Two teams. $60k in bonus money on the table. Here's the whole picture in one page.

WHAT'S ON THE TABLE

$60k

Total bonus pool across the campaign

$200k

Collective revenue trigger to unlock

$2k

Per rep IF the team hits the $200k trigger

$3k

Bonus for each rep on the WINNING team

$125

Commission per Dominance package deal

TEAM ALPHA

Three runners

TEAM LEAD: appointed

Leader is accountable for the team's collective number, not their personal close rate. Coach teammates. Win as a unit.

TEAM BRAVO

Three runners

TEAM LEAD: appointed

Same accountability. Same model. The winner picks up $3k per rep on top of the $2k team trigger.

THE TARGET — EXISTING CLIENT BASE

This is NOT cold outreach. The target is the existing client base — clients who are under-spending for their industry and haven't been called proactively in months. They trust the company. They'll be surprised by the call. That surprise is the opening.

THE QUOTE

"Six weeks. $200k in revenue. I'll show you how. It's actually easy — just say what you do, do what you say, have a strategy, communicate every inch of the way."

The authority reframe — opening script

Don't open as the account manager who hasn't called for four months. Open as someone senior. This single shift changes the entire conversation.

THE OPENING LINE

“Hi Bob, [name] here. I’m the head of customer service / sales director at Marketing Sweet. I know I’m not your normal point of contact. The reason for my call is your campaign came up on my radar when I was reviewing all of our accounts. I’ve had a look at yours — and I want to walk you through what I’ve seen and what we’re going to do about it.”

WHAT THIS DOES IN 20 SECONDS

- Elevates YOU above the account-manager frame the client expected.
- Frames the silence as strategic (“came up on my radar”), not as neglect.
- Positions the rest of the call as you DRIVING a plan, not asking for one.
- Customer shifts from “questioning the relationship” into “receiving the plan.”

THE NO-APOLOGIES RULE

Do NOT apologise for the silence. The minute you say “sorry I haven’t called” — they’ve got you. Frame the silence as strategy.

“There was no point calling without a plan. Now we have a plan — that’s why I’m calling.”

(The reason we hadn’t called is because the results weren’t there to call about. That’s honest, and it’s the right frame.)

SET UP YOUR AUTHORITY WEB PAGE BY FRIDAY

Photo. Title. Short bio. 60–90 sec video. Direct number routing to the ticketing system. Send it at the end of the first call to cement the authority frame between contacts.

Pigeonhole pricing + the backlink cheat sheet

When they push back on spend, you have two tools: anchor pricing high, and shift the conversation from cost to math.

PIGEONHOLE PRICING

Open at the price you WANT, with a clear view to coming down by one tier if needed. Standard campaign play:

- Open at $550/mo (authority package). View to come down to $300/mo if heavy resistance.
- State the number — no soft hedges (“I was thinking maybe...”). Then justify it with math.
- “I don’t want to spend more” → “I understand. The question is what you NEED to.”

THE BACKLINK CHEAT SHEET — QUANTITATIVE AUTHORITY

“You’re currently on 14 backlinks per month. Industry standard for your category is 63. That’s 4.5x what you’re currently doing. Without that volume, organic ranking is mathematically very difficult. What I’m recommending is the authority package — 126 backlinks/month. That’s 9x your current quota. THIS is the number that moves your campaign.”

Replace a PRICE conversation (“why is it so expensive”) with a MATH conversation (“why are you under-resourced”). They can argue with prices. They can’t argue with the math.

BEFORE EVERY CALL

Know the prospect’s current backlink count. Know the industry standard for their category. Know the multiplier the recommended package delivers. Without these three numbers, you’re winging it — and the cheat sheet exists so you don’t have to.

The 4-month trial override

Your authorised concession. Frame it as a favour. Use it to remove the 12-month-commitment objection without losing the duration we need.

HOW IT WORKS

- Client signs a 4-MONTH TRIAL term.
- At the 3-month mark, you (or someone from the team) calls them.
- They decide whether to roll into the remaining 8 months of the standard 12-month term.
- Reps receive 50% of standard commission on signup. Other 50% paid IF the client converts to the full 12-month term.

HOW TO POSITION IT ON THE CALL

“Normally I’d ask for a full 12-month commitment — that’s how the work compounds. But because you’ve been with us for [X months/years] and I want this to be easy for you, I can authorise a 4-month trial. At month three, you’ll get a call. If you want to continue, we roll into the remaining 8 months. If not, you walk. That gives you a proper window to see if this is working.”

WHY IT WORKS

- Removes the “12-month commitment” objection without removing the duration we need.
- The rep has authorisation power — that’s itself an authority signal.
- Half commission upfront, half on conversion = rep motivated to deliver real results in the trial window.
- At month three, the conversion call is about CONFIRMING what they’ve experienced — not persuading them to commit.

REMEMBER

This is the CAMPAIGN concession. It’s not the new default. Frame it as a favour you’re extending — not as a standard offer.

The sniper daily protocol

Every call is treated like surgery — preparation hours before, reviewed before going out. Cold calls and “see how it goes” are over.

SCHEDULE LOCKED

Tomorrow's 3–4 appointments confirmed the day before. No surprises.

PRE-PREP EACH CALL

Spend, backlinks, industry standard, recommended package, opening line, expected objection, response.

MORNING REVIEW

Bring all 3–4 plans to morning catch-up. Walk through them with team + director. Adjust if needed.

EXECUTE IN WINDOW

Make the calls in the assigned window. Take notes immediately after each one.

END-OF-DAY DEBRIEF

What worked? What didn't? What's the change for tomorrow?

ZERO FATALITIES — THE RULE

If you LOSE an existing client during the campaign, you have to sell twice as hard to make ground back. Every call has TWO acceptable outcomes: UPSOLD or HELD (client stays where they are, agrees to follow-up). Lost clients are not acceptable. If a call is heading toward a loss, BACK OFF and book a future re-engagement — don't push into “I'm leaving.”

THE QUOTE

“One bullet, one kill. Test the win. Test everything. Run it by me. Every single deal.”

The new calendar model

You no longer own your own calendar. The schedule is owned centrally and assigned daily. Here's the trade — and why it works.

OLD MODEL

average cash, lots of work

- Rep controls own calendar.
- Pick which clients to call when — based on instinct, not plan.
- Self-managed prep time (often no prep).
- No oversight on call quality.
- Calendar drift normal — Friday ends at 7pm exhausted.
- Days fill with low-value work (Parkinson's Law).

NEW MODEL

bulk cash, less work

- Calendar owned centrally; assigned day before.
- Receive 3–4 appointments per day from the schedule owner.
- Daily catch-up to review the day's pitch plans.
- Every call plan reviewed before it goes out.
- Compressed calendar — Friday 2pm knock-off, every week.
- Days focused on revenue-generating work only.

PARKINSON'S LAW — WHY THIS WORKS

"Work expands to fill the time available." When reps own their calendars, the day fills with low-value work because the time exists to fill. When the calendar is compressed and assigned, the same reps complete MORE revenue work in LESS time. The trade is: less autonomy over WHEN you work — in exchange for finishing earlier, earning more, and going home Friday 2pm.

THE FRIDAY 2PM RULE

Knock off Friday 2pm every week. If something isn't done by then, it rolls to Monday. Full focus Monday–Thursday in exchange. The compression IS the deal.

A → A communication + pack leadership

The campaign cannot run on B-mode communication or lone-wolf leadership. Both fail at this scale, this fast.

A → A IN THE CAMPAIGN

Director: "Call Client X today at 2pm. Use the authority package as the anchor."

Mode A rep: "Got it. Two quick questions — are they at $300 or $550 currently, and are there any recent issues that might come up?" → director answers → rep acts.

Mode B rep: "Yeah, I'll have a think about whether the authority package is right for them and let you know later." → that's the call that loses the deal.

DISAGREEMENT IS WELCOME — JUST NOT B-MODE

If you think the brief is wrong, say so IN the conversation. "Actually I'd push for momentum, not authority, because their backlink situation is X. Want me to test that?" That's A-mode disagreement. It moves the campaign forward. B-mode (going-off-to-process) freezes it.

PACK vs LONE WOLF — FOR TEAM LEADS

The instinct to handle problems alone — to "not bother anyone" with what's breaking — is SELFISH, even when it feels heroic. The campaign is collective. You can't carry a $200k target alone. Problems hidden from the team compound silently. The team finds out when the deal is already lost.

Every team meeting starts with: "Where are we vs the number?" Public, transparent, honest. Every blocker surfaces within 24 hours. Ask for help BEFORE you're drowning. The ask is itself a leadership signal.

THE QUOTE

"I'd rather be a pack animal and eat the lone wolf. I'm not into glamour and honour — I just want to destroy what has to be destroyed, and it doesn't matter how I do it."

TODAY'S TEST

Am I running the model — or running the day?

AUTHORITY

Open with the senior title. No apologies. Frame the silence as strategy. Send the web page after.

MATH

Backlink numbers beat price objections. Know their current quota, industry standard, and the multiplier you're recommending.

TRIAL

Use the 4-month trial as your authorised concession. Frame it as a favour. Half commission now, half on conversion.

SNIPER

Three calls a day, three plans, three pre-meets. Zero fatalities. Upsold or held — never lost.

PACK

Surface blockers in 24 hours. Lone-wolf leadership loses a six-week sprint. Ask before you're drowning.

Hard now — easy later. Six weeks of focus, $60k in bonus, model lives forever.
