

Frame It. Don't Spin It. Win the Day.

How you present the facts dictates the energy you carry into the next meeting. State the numbers cold. Lead with the win. Keep the smog out.

WHAT'S INSIDE

- 01 Know the numbers cold
Booked, attended, closed - exact, before being asked.
- 02 Actions, not plans
What did you do? Not what are you going to do.
- 03 Discipline > outcomes
Right habits produce the result. You don't have a choice.
- 04 Framing - the main lesson
Spin vs frame. The denominator changes everything.
- 05 Keep the smog out
Crowd the negativity out. Don't argue with it.
- 06 The display cabinet
Your energy broadcasts. Manage what the team sees.
- 07 The long game
Plant the seed. Let the bad day do the closing.
- 08 Daily reference card
Print and pin. Read every morning.

Know the numbers cold.

Booked, attended, closed. Three different denominators. You should be able to state all three before being asked.

BOOKED

The promises.

Meetings the diary says will happen.

ATTENDED

The opportunities.

Meetings that actually took place. The real denominator.

CLOSED

The outcomes.

Deals that became revenue. The numerator.

WHY THE DENOMINATOR MATTERS

USING BOOKED AS THE DENOMINATOR

10 booked | 3 closed
= 30% close rate

Sounds like a miss. Bad energy into the next meeting.

USING ATTENDED AS THE DENOMINATOR

4 attended | 3 closed
= 75% close rate

Same week. Different denominator. Different story.

THE RULE

Walk in with the exact count of booked, attended, and closed - and the close rate against each.

Actions, not plans.

Plans are deferred actions. The leadership question is sharper: what did you actually do?

PLANS · THE TRAP

*Hiding inside preparation. Designing the ad.
Rewriting the script. Researching the angle.
Telling the boss the strategy.*

WHAT IT SOUNDS LIKE:

- "I've got an ad up."
- "I've got a plan in place."
- "I'm thinking about how to approach it."
- "I asked someone what they thought."
- "It's going up tomorrow."

ACTIONS · THE WORK

*Conversations started. People asked.
Numbers added to the tally. Activity completed - not activity planned.*

WHAT IT SOUNDS LIKE:

- "I spoke to four people this weekend."
- "I sent five DMs on Sunday."
- "I made the calls and tracked the responses."
- "I started two real conversations."
- "I followed up with three from last week."

THE TEST

If you can't put a number on this week's activity, it was a plan, not an action. Count it next week.

Discipline > outcomes.

Right habits produce the result. The result is a by-product - never the goal.

THE "NO CHOICE" PRINCIPLE

If you keep the disciplines exactly, you don't have a choice but to get the outcome. The maths of consistency takes care of it. Cold calls turn into meetings. Conversations turn into hires. The leader's only job is to keep you in the disciplines long enough for the maths to run.

MANUFACTURED LUCK

Lucky people aren't luckier. They've just kept the disciplines long enough for the probability to land in their favour. You manufacture luck by constantly trying. Stop trying, stop being lucky.

Framing - the main lesson.

Same facts. Two ways to present them. The framing decides what the next meeting feels like.

POORLY FRAMED

"We had ten meetings, only closed three."

WHAT IT DOES:

- Uses booked as the denominator.
- Hides the wins under the misses.
- Makes the leader dig for the positives.
- Carries deflation into the next meeting.
- Sounds like excuses dressed as numbers.
- Triggers self-doubt mid-week.

WELL FRAMED

"We attended four, closed three - 75% close rate."

WHAT IT DOES:

- Uses attended as the denominator.
- Leads with what worked.
- States the rate the leader cares about.
- Carries momentum into the next meeting.
- Sounds like a precise account of activity.
- Triggers more of the same behaviour.

FRAME IS NOT SPIN

Spin distorts the facts to make you look good. Frame presents the facts correctly, with the denominator that matters. Same data. Sharper picture.

Keep the smog out of your head.

Negativity from customers, peers, family - it all wants in. Don't argue with it. Crowd it out.

SMOGGY BRAIN

WHAT'S IN IT:

- Other people's doubt.
- Last week's rejections.
- The customer who pushed back.
- The story you told yourself.

CLEAR BRAIN

WHAT'S IN IT:

- Today's three wins.
- What you learned this week.
- The next conversation you'll start.
- Gratitude with quiet dissatisfaction.

THE DEFENCE

You don't fight the smog - you crowd it out. Be the first person to frame your day. Notice the win. Say it out loud. Write it down. When the toxin arrives, the room is already full of something else.

The display cabinet.

Once you have direct reports, you don't get to feel privately. Your energy is broadcast.

MANAGER ON DISPLAY

24 / 7

WHO'S WATCHING:

- Direct reports
reading your energy every morning
- Peers
tracking whether you stay sharp
- Recruits
deciding if they want to be near you
- Customers
feeling whether you mean what you say

GRATEFUL BUT UNSATISFIED

Gratitude is the floor - it stops you sliding into lack mindset. Mild dissatisfaction is the ceiling - it keeps you reaching. Hold both at once.

INTERNAL HIGH STANDARD

Beat yourself up quietly. The team should never see it. They need to see who they're trying to become - prepared, deliberate, upbeat. Pressure stays inside.

The long game + power language.

Plant the seed. Stay in light contact. Let the bad day do the closing - not you.

01

PLANT

Mention what you do. Mention how good it is. Leave it there. No pitch on day one.

02

CHECK IN

Light contact. "How's work going?" - never "Have you decided yet?" Stay warm, stay back.

03

WAIT FOR IT

The bad day arrives. The seed you planted weeks earlier is the first thing they reach for.

POWER LANGUAGE

The words you choose are the frame the listener uses. "I reckon," "maybe," "we'll see" pull authority out of every sentence. "Absolutely," "done," "it's happening" put it back in.

WEAK

- "I reckon..."
- "Maybe I'll..."
- "We'll see what happens."
- "I'll try."

STRONG

- "Absolutely."
- "It's done."
- "It's happening."
- "I'll have it Friday."

Daily reference card.

Print and pin. Read every morning before walking onto the floor.

DO · EVERY DAY

- State the win first. Lead the conversation with what worked.
- Walk in with exact numbers - booked, attended, closed.
- Use attended as the denominator. State the rate out loud.
- Count actions, not plans. Bring the count.
- Crowd out the smog - notice three wins before lunch.
- Use power words. "Absolutely." "Done." "It's happening."
- Plant a seed in every conversation outside the office.
- Run the leader's technique exactly - no edits.

DON'T · EVER

- Don't open with what didn't work.
- Don't guess at numbers. Don't say "I think it was six."
- Don't confuse a plan with an action.
- Don't expect same-day yes from a long-game conversation.
- Don't argue with the smog - just don't let it sit.
- Don't break character when a meeting wobbles.
- Don't bury the win under a story about the gap.
- Don't broadcast internal frustration to the team.

WATCH-OUTS

- Hiding behind preparation instead of acting.
- Letting one recruit be the whole pipeline.
- Spin vs frame - facts must stay accurate.
- Power language slipping back to "I reckon."
- Going in for the kill on day one of a recruit chat.
- Reaping the seed before the bad day arrives.
- Forgetting you're in the display cabinet.
- Mistaking gratitude for complacency.

THE ONE-LINER

State the numbers. Lead with the win. Plant the seed. Stay in the work.
