

Not a Priority. Never Will Be.

Closing the silent-killer website objection.

Session 38 · Thursday 18 June 2026 · Marketing Sweet

IN THIS TOOLKIT

- 01 Agree first — "never will be"
- 02 The silent killer frame
- 03 The under-quote trick
- 04 Nudging words + toolbox phrases
- 05 The grudge purchase + bald tyre
- 06 Daily reference card

01 · THE UNLOCK

"Never Will Be."

Take the buyer's objection further than they did.

WHAT THE BUYER SAYS

"My website's bad. I know it. I've been meaning to do something — it's just not a priority right now."

WHAT MOST REPS DO · WRONG

Push harder on the value. Manufacture urgency. Argue for the website. Sound like every other website salesperson the buyer has fobbed off this year. Call ends.

THE LINE · USE VERBATIM

"I totally understand. It's not a priority — and I'll be honest with you, it never will be a priority. People only get concerned about their health when they've got a health problem. Websites work the same way."

WHY IT WORKS

The buyer is prepared to defend "not now." They have no defensive script ready for "never." You've removed their most reliable exit — "I'll do it later" — by gently pointing out that later doesn't actually arrive.

02 · THE FRAME

Silent Killer / Silent Winner

Why this objection is so sticky.

SILENT WINNER

Good website → referrals convert

Every referral that lands confirms the buyer's reputation and converts to a job. Buyer keeps getting referrals.

BUYER NEVER FINDS OUT → CREDIT TO REPUTATION

SILENT KILLER

Bad website → referrals leave

Every referral that lands sees a dated, unprofessional site and goes elsewhere. Buyer never finds out.

BUYER NEVER FINDS OUT → LEAK PERSISTS

THE GUARANTEE · USE SPARINGLY

"I can't guarantee many things. But I can guarantee you that right now, you're losing money to your website. That's a guarantee."

WHY IT'S DEFENSIBLE

Any referral-driven business has referrals checking the website. Some don't call. The number is greater than zero. The rep doesn't need to know HOW many — just that the buyer agrees it's some.

03 · THE TACTICAL MOVE

The $5,000 Trick

Make them volunteer the real loss number.

THE MOVE

"Let's say your average job is worth, what — about $5,000? Just one referral that didn't call you because your website looked dated. That's $5,000 gone."

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT

Buyer: "$5,000? Mate, my average job is more like $20,000."

Result: Buyer just volunteered their own loss number. You never had to argue it.

THE LOSS IS NOW REAL · $20K PER REFERRAL THAT DIDN'T CALL

TWO EXTENSIONS · STACK THEMAge of the site

"When's the last time you had this built — five years ago?" Most sites are 10-20 years old. Buyer corrects up. Site is now overdue.

Rebuild frequency

"You should be redoing this every five years or so." Buyer agrees. They now believe their site is overdue.

Combined

Three small under-estimates → three buyer corrections → case for action built without ever pushing.

04 · THE SCREWDRIVERS

Nudgers + Toolbox Phrases

Memorise. Use verbatim.

NUDGING WORDS · SOFT CONFIDENCE, NO ARROGANT ABSOLUTES

MOST GENERALLY

Replace "all," "every," "always" with these two. Same authority. None of the brittleness. Impossible to argue with a single counter-example.

TOOLBOX PHRASES · USE VERBATIM

- ◆ "Whether with us or someone else — you need to do something."
- ◆ "Definitely less expensive than you think."
- ◆ "Can I please explain to you why..."
- ◆ "You should be more scared of what you're losing."
- ◆ "This is the front of house of your business — like all your machinery, it needs maintenance."

05 · WHY THEY'RE STALLING

The Grudge Purchase

Websites aren't shoes. They're tyres.

GRUDGE PURCHASES

- Tyres
- Insurance
- Plumbing repairs
- Roof restoration
- Websites

PLEASURE PURCHASES

- ◆ New shoes
- ◆ Holiday
- ◆ New car
- ◆ Sunglasses
- ◆ Restaurant dinner

THE BALD TYRE · ANALOGY THAT LANDS

"Imagine I pointed at your car and said one of your tyres is bald. What would you say?" Buyer: "I know, I've been meaning to deal with it." Same response as the website. Same grudge purchase. Same procrastination.

WAIT FOR THE BLOWOUT OR FIX IT NOW?

THE KITCHEN-MAKER STORY · WHAT SILENT KILLER ACTUALLY COSTS

Kitchen-maker. No website. Got referred to a $100k kitchen job. Customer couldn't get a sense of his work, went elsewhere. Kitchen-maker turned down a $7k website that would have closed the $100k job — "I don't want those kinds of clients." Business closed a few years later.

$7K WEBSITE · $100K LOST JOB · COMPANY GONE

REFERENCE

Daily Card · Keep By the Phone

The whole session on one page.

THE OPENER

- ◆ "I totally understand. Not a priority — and never will be."
- ◆ "People only get concerned about their health when they have a health problem."
- ◆ Watch the buyer's silence → "yeah, you're probably right."

THE GUARANTEE

- ◆ Websites are silent killers. Buyer can't measure the leak.
- ◆ "I can guarantee you you're losing money. That's a guarantee."
- ◆ Under-quote average job ($5k). Watch buyer correct upward.

THE WORDS

- ◆ "Most" and "generally" everywhere — never "all" or "every."
- ◆ "Whether with us or someone else." / "Definitely less expensive than you think."
- ◆ Attack PROCESS, not price. Process is the agency's actual advantage.

THE STORY

- ◆ Website is a bald tyre. Grudge purchase. Procrastinated by default.
- ◆ Kitchen-maker: $7k website would've closed $100k job. Business gone.
- ◆ Know the 7-step build process by memory. Conviction follows knowledge.

AGREE FIRST · TAKE IT FURTHER · MAKE THE SILENT KILLER VISIBLE