

Pitch High. Show the Stack. Let Them Choose.

Visual reference cards from the sales training session led by director Corie Dawson. Print, pin to your wall, or keep on your desk.

WHAT'S INSIDE

- 01 The phrase swap
The single most important question change
- 02 Pitch high — pricing principle
Why your starting number sets the ceiling
- 03 The three-website demo
Your default pitch sequence
- 04 “I need to think about it”
Decision tree for the killer objection
- 05 The close sequence
From trial close to deposit
- 06 High price = safety
The psychology behind the principle
- 07 Tonality cheat card
What your voice should be doing

The phrase swap

The fastest single change you can make. Replace the question on the left with the question on the right — every pitch, every time.

STOP SAYING

“What’s your budget?”

START SAYING

“Which one do you like the look of best?”

WHY: Asking budget anchors them low and feels offensive. Showing three priced options lets them self-select — their choice tells you their real spend without you ever having to ask.

STOP SAYING

“It’s a big decision.”

START SAYING

“It’s a small investment relative to what it returns.”

WHY: If you frame it as big, the client feels it as big. The website is a one-off purchase that pays for itself with one or two new clients.

STOP SAYING

“Can you afford this package?”

START SAYING

“Which website did you like the most?”

WHY: Same question, reframed as visual preference. They reveal price tolerance through what they pick.

STOP SAYING

“Do you need time to think?”

START SAYING

“Where do we need to be on the price point?”

WHY: Before they leave the call, ask one curious-and-caring question to find out if it's really price. If it is, you have something to work with.

STOP SAYING

Dropping the price unilaterally

START SAYING

“Let me speak to my manager — give me two minutes.”

WHY: Never lower the price for no reason. Make them give you a number first, then go ‘negotiate’ it. The friction is the close.

Pitch high — your start price sets the ceiling

Buyers always negotiate down. Nobody walks a price up. Your opening number is the highest it will ever be.

Start: $11,000

Pitch HIGH

Land: $10,000

Start: $7,000

Pitch MEDIUM

Land: $5,500

Start: $3,000

Pitch LOW

Land: $2,000

THE RULE

Pitching MEDIUM gets you LOW. Pitching HIGH gets you MEDIUM. When in doubt, always pitch up — then let the customer talk you down to a number you're both happy with.

The three-website demo

Your default pitch sequence. The customer reveals what they can spend by which website they pick.

1

OPEN WITH PROOF

Pull up a recent client. Have the prospect type their keywords into Google live. Show real rankings and three written testimonials. Build trust before talking price.

↓

2

SHOW THREE PRICED EXAMPLES

Three live websites we've built. Same quality, ascending price. Lead with the high one.

Tier A: $7,000 — clean baseline

Tier B: $8,000 — baseline + extras

Tier C: $10,000 — extra landing pages, more polish

↓

3

ASK THE QUESTION

"Which one do you like the look of best?"

The entire qualifying step. Their answer = the price they can spend, without you ever asking budget.

↓

4

TRIAL CLOSE

"Sounds like you're ready for the next step. All I need is a $500 deposit to lock you into the build schedule — we're booking up. Sound fair?"

REMEMBER

To the customer, all three websites look the same. They're telling you which price feels safe — that's what you're really asking.

"I need to think about it"

Almost never about thinking. Use this tree to diagnose what's really happening — then act.

The close sequence

From trial close to deposit. The choreography after the customer has picked their tier.

STEP 1 • TRIAL CLOSE

“Are you comfortable going to the next step?”

WHY: If they say ‘yes’ or even hesitate — keep going. If they ask ‘what’s the next step?’ they’re buying time.

STEP 2 • ANCHOR THE DEPOSIT

“We’ve done the hard part. Price works. I don’t see a reason for us not to do business together. All I need is a $500 deposit to lock you in.”

WHY: Deposit isn’t ‘final commitment’. It’s the act that confirms the rest.

STEP 3 • ADD REAL SCARCITY

“We’re booking up — I want to lock in your build slot before the end of the week.”

WHY: Don’t invent. Do mention the calendar. Real urgency closes hesitation.

STEP 4 • HANDLE THE WOBBLE

If they need time — ask: “Was it the price, or the product?” Then run the decision tree on Page 5.

WHY: Never let them off the call without one diagnostic question.

STEP 5 • IF THEY NEED A DAY

“You asked for one day — I’ll give you four. I’ll call Monday at 11. Speak to your husband, any questions, call me.”

WHY: Sounds professional, not pushy. Books the next contact. ~80% close.

GOLDEN RULE

Never drop the price unilaterally. If you have to soften, get a number from them first — then ‘negotiate’ it.

High price = safety

The pricing principle Corie demonstrated with the Charlotte Tilbury vs $12.50 foundation example.

WHEN YOU PITCH LOW

Foundation, $12.50

CUSTOMER REACTS WITH:

Distrust. Suspicion. Interrogation.

FIRST QUESTION:

"What is in the product?"

NEXT QUESTION:

"What is it going to do to my skin?"

THEN:

"How long is it going to last?"

BRAIN SAYS:

Cheap = unsafe. Run scripts to find the catch.

YOUR PITCH:

Defends. Justifies. Apologises.

WHEN YOU PITCH HIGH

Collagen serum, $370

CUSTOMER REACTS WITH:

Aspiration. Reassurance. 'This must be quality.'

FIRST QUESTION:

"Can I afford it?"

NEXT QUESTION:

"Can I justify it to myself?"

THEN:

Negotiates with their own budget, not your product.

BRAIN SAYS:

Expensive = safe. The Kardashians use it.

YOUR PITCH:

Holds the line. Lets price do the work.

TRANSLATED FOR US

When you walk in with a $3,000 website quote, the prospect hears 'cheap and risky' — even if it's a great deal. When you lead with a $10,000 example, you're positioning us as the quality option. They'll talk themselves down to a price they're comfortable paying — and feel good about it.

Tonality — what your voice should be doing

Words alone don't close. Same line, different tone, different result. Practise the right tonality on every key phrase.

WHEN YOU SAY

“Our top package is $10,000.”

✓ Confident, neutral. Like quoting the time.

✗ Apologetic, hedging, voice rising at the end.

MATTER-OF-FACT

WHEN YOU SAY

“Where do we need to be on price?”

✓ Like a friend asking for genuine information.

✗ Pushy, accusing, or pleading.

CURIOUS + CARING

WHEN YOU SAY

“I couldn't do $800 — best I got was $825.”

✓ Like you've let them down a little. 'Sorry I couldn't quite get there.'

✗ Triumphant or relieved — they'll smell the squeeze.

SLIGHTLY DISAPPOINTED

WHEN YOU SAY

“It's my job to follow you up.”

✓ Calm, factual. 'I get paid to do this.'

✗ Pushy, breathless, eager.

PROFESSIONAL

WHEN YOU SAY

“We're not for everyone.”

✓ Like you don't need the deal. Drop the rope.

✗ Defensive or wounded.

RELAXED + UNATTACHED

WHEN YOU SAY

“All I need is a $500 deposit.”

✓ Like ordering a coffee. The deal is already done.

✗ Tentative, asking-for-permission.

CASUAL + ASSUMPTIVE

DRILL

Practise these lines out loud. Record yourself. The script is half of it — the tone is the other half, and the half that closes the deal.