

Process Your Problems.

Don't hide them.

Session 43 · Mon 20 July 2026 · Marketing Sweet

IN THIS TOOLKIT

- 01 Suppress vs process
- 02 Real gratitude · the anchor point
- 03 The three-question check
- 04 The two questions inside every setback
- 05 Respond, don't react · the felt tone
- 06 Daily reference card

01 · THE MISTAKE MOST REPS MAKE

Suppress vs Process

You don't stop emotions. You process them.

SUPPRESS · WHAT MOST DO

- ✗ Pretend everything is fine
- ✗ Push through as if nothing happened
- ✗ Weight accumulates invisibly
- ✗ Emotion leaks into every call
- ✗ Eventually surfaces as burnout

PROCESS · WHAT WORKS

- ◆ Name what you're carrying
- ◆ Find one true anchor of gratitude
- ◆ Ask "what can I learn?"
- ◆ Talk to a trusted person
- ◆ Dial the next call cleaner

WHY THE ATTEMPT TO SUPPRESS FAILS

You're a person, not a machine. The attempt to become one produces worse outcomes than the honest alternative. Emotion suppressed doesn't disappear — it accumulates. It leaks into every call. It ambushes the rep mid-conversation. It shows up as burnout six months later.

PROCESSED ≠ SOLVED

Processing is dealing with the emotion. Solving is fixing the problem. They're different jobs.

02 · THE PRIMARY TOOL

Real Gratitude

Not the greeting-card kind. The anchor kind.

WHAT REAL GRATITUDE IS

Finding something real to appreciate INSIDE a genuinely hard situation. Not pretending the situation isn't hard. Not manufacturing false positivity. Refusing to let one difficult moment define the whole field of view.

CORIE'S EXAMPLE · THE DAY HIS FATHER DIED

One of the hardest days of his life. Nothing about it was easy. Nothing about it was fair. In the immediate aftermath, there was nothing to be grateful for — the loss was the loss.

THE REFRAME OFFERED LATER

Instead of a stranger delivering the news to his mother, Corie was there himself. He was the one to sit with her. The situation hadn't changed. The father was still gone. But there was ONE thing inside the moment that was, honestly, something to be grateful for.

→ Gratitude doesn't erase pain. It helps you find meaning inside it.

THE MECHANISM

One true anchor point outside the pain doesn't reduce the pain. It prevents the pain from becoming the entire field of view. The rep can still function. Still show up. Still call the next buyer.

03 · THE DAILY TOOL

Three Questions

The ground under you is almost always still there.

Q1 Can you eat?

Are your basic needs met? Almost always yes.

Q2 Can you breathe?

Are you here, present, alive? Yes.

Q3 Can you live another day?

Is tomorrow going to happen? Yes.

IF ALL THREE = YES

You still have opportunity. You still have choice. You still have time. This doesn't minimise the problem — the problem is real. It just makes the ground under you visible again.

04 · THE REFRAME

Two Questions Inside Every Setback

One creates frustration. One creates progress.

THE DEFAULT QUESTION

"Why is this happening to me?"

- ✗ Produces frustration
- ✗ Feels unfair
- ✗ Creates self-pity
- ✗ Points nowhere

→ STUCK IN THE MOMENT

THE REDIRECT QUESTION

"What can I learn from this?"

- ◆ Produces movement
- ◆ Creates curiosity
- ◆ Builds skill
- ◆ Points forward

→ MOVING THROUGH IT

THE DISCIPLINE · DON'T LINGER

Most people default to the first question — it's the natural emotional response. The discipline is to notice the default, let it pass, then swap deliberately. "Why is this happening?" runs its course. The rep redirects to "what's the lesson here?" Over time the redirect becomes automatic.

STRONG REPS AREN'T THE ONES WHO NEVER ASK Q1. THEY'RE THE ONES WHO DON'T STAY THERE LONG.

05 · WHY THIS MATTERS IN A CALL

Respond, Don't React

Customers can feel your mindset.

REACTIVE · UNPROCESSEDBuyer's words trigger you.

Your next line is defensive. Buyer feels the anxiety through the phone. Easy to destabilise. One firm objection puts you on the back foot for the rest of the call.

RESPONSIVE · PROCESSEDBuyer's words are received.

You consider. You respond with intent. Hard to destabilise. Buyer can push and you receive it. Reads as competence — because it is.

THE CALM COMES FROM PROCESSING

Processed reps sound different. Calmer. More present. Less reactive. Can be told no without spiralling. Can hear an objection as information rather than as a personal attack. Can hold a silence without rushing to fill it.

THIS ISN'T A TECHNIQUE

It's a byproduct of a rep who has already dealt with their own weight before picking up the phone. Buyers can feel the difference — even when they can't articulate what they're picking up on.

REFERENCE

Daily Card · Keep By the Phone

The whole session on one page.

THE MINDSET

- ◆ You don't hide problems. You process them.
- ◆ Suppress and it leaks. Process and it moves.
- ◆ Everyone is carrying something. It's not just you.

THE TOOLS

- ◆ Real gratitude: one true anchor inside a hard moment.
- ◆ The check: eat / breathe / live another day?
- ◆ "What can I learn?" beats "why is this happening?"

THE PEOPLE

- ◆ Processing isn't a solo activity.
- ◆ Find one trusted person to think alongside.
- ◆ Asking is strength, not weakness.

THE CALL

- ◆ Buyers can feel your mindset through the phone.
- ◆ Processed reps sound calmer, more present.
- ◆ Respond, don't react. The buyer notices both.

PROCESS · DON'T HIDE · MOVE FORWARD DESPITE THE PROBLEMS, NOT INSTEAD OF THEM